

Dear

It's been seven years since Congress passed the 2002 Bioterrorism Act. It's been seven years since we were promised that the government would finally stockpile enough potassium iodide (KI) to protect all Americans at risk of a nuclear incident. But today, nothing has changed. Now we're told comprehensive stockpiling might raise fears questions about the safety of the nuclear power industry.

Please do what's right. Implement the 2002 Act. Follow the NAS studies, which said the government must take steps to make sure everyone at risk is protected. Don't leave this gaping hole in our national safety net unplugged.

Thank you,
